Become a Program Advisory Committee Member

Program Advisory Committee members are critical to the success of Humber's students. Become a committee member and be part of our dynamic academic community.

About Program Advisory Committees

Program Advisory Committees help Humber create one of the most dynamic program rosters in Canada by keeping the College connected to the trends and needs of society.

Members interact with other leaders in their fields to help ensure programs remain current and relevant to the marketplace needs.

Program Advisory Committee members include: employers, graduates, business and industry leaders, and representatives from professional and accrediting bodies and agencies.

Each program advisory committee elects a chair who serves for a two-year term (renewable once) as a facilitator and leader at committee meetings. The chair may also represent the advisory committee at College functions such as convocation and award ceremonies.

Role of Program Advisory Committees

Humber's Program Advisory Committees are vital to educational planning at Humber. They advise on a broad range of topics such as:

- Co-operative experiences and field placement
- Employment prospects
- Student awards
- Public relations
- Curriculum
- Technology
- Program review
- Special assignments

With the support of its Program Advisory Committees, Humber offers students current and innovative educational experiences in a wide range of career-focused programs.

Committee members attend and participate in meetings, and may become involved in subcommittee activities and projects. Committee members participate in agenda setting and evaluation of meetings.

Frequently Asked Questions

How can I become a Humber Program Advisory committee member?

Appointments to a Program Advisory Committee are made by the Board of Governors and President on the recommendation of Humber Faculty Senior Deans.

What is the length of service?

The appointment is for three years, with potential for one extension.

What kind of time commitment is required?

Typically, committee members spend approximately 15 to 20 hours per year on their committee involvement.

How often do seats on committees become available?

Most committees allow for some new members to be appointed every year. This ensures the continuity of the committee's activities and the introduction of new perspectives. Membership is reviewed annually to preserve the vitality of the committee.
