

Advocacy Club

Four Deaf-Blind individuals that come together once a month and actually provide support to one another, support that can't be quantified, support that is more meaningful than most of us will ever know.

I joined because I've had enough with barriers and trying to get through and in hearing a lot of no, and being frustrated. So, I didn't really have a team at that time so I was getting a lot of oppression and I wanted to show people that I can do the same and that we have a right to accessibility.

This is the advocacy club. We meet once a month come rain or shine. Some of us can't make it all the time but that is OK. We know that we are here for each other. The act of coming together is important and resonates to the Deaf-Blind community even if we don't know it at the time. I made this documentary to show you that I can make movies, and I can make movies that are accessible. So why can't you?
