Developing an Antiracist Mindset and Addressing Racism

Rita Kohli is a dedicated practitioner for change evolving her approaches from her politicized lived experiences and work in several sectors including the post-secondary college sector. She has worked in leadership and senior management positions in the non-profit sector advancing issues of racialized equity, both in unionized and non-unionized workplaces. Rita has also presented and advanced racialized health equity frameworks at local and international forums.

Rita is a graduate (M.A.) in Psychology from Punjab University, India, and an MEd from the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education (OISE), University of Toronto, in Community Psychology, Feminist Stream and is currently an EdD candidate at OISE). She is a registered Psychotherapist with the College of Registered Psychotherapists in Ontario and the principal consultant for Tools for Change.

“The seduction of possibilities” keeps Rita engaged in transformative racialized equity work to disrupt the unholy trinity of ideology, systems and individual behaviours that support white body supremacy.
