Are you mentoring someone, or find yourself in a mentorship role? If so, there is a strong chance that you are engaging principles of great coaching already. Are you a teacher who believes in student-centered learning? In this workshop, we will explore coaching and how incorporating coaching methods in your mentoring and/or teaching can help create and support transformative, deep growth and learning, and positive results. It will also identify areas to incorporate coaching conversations into your next mentoring session, and tactics and tips to get started with coaching in the classroom.
